

More past client referrals

You found them a good home. Now don't get stuck with a cheap inspector. Keep your buyers happy after the closing. Use NACHI certified home inspectors.

Blame the agent! That's what happens when your inspector finds defects that really don't exist, or worse . . . misses defects that really do exist. Keep your clients happy after the closing by encouraging them to use a NACHI certified home inspector. All NACHI inspectors have to pass NACHI's Inspector Exam every year, complete an Ethics Obstacle Course, take a Standards of Practice Course & Quiz, take a roofing course, fulfill Continuing Education requirements (24 hours/year, the highest in the nation), have access to advisory boards, and have use a time-tested inspection agreement which includes a real estate agent hold-harmless clause, keeping them and you out of court.

Don't hurt your clients, and your own referral business, with an uncertified inspector. Do yourself and your client a favor . . . use only NACHI certified home inspectors. NACHI, the best home inspectors in the world.

Southern Ontario's Choice

"Inspected Once, Inspected Right."

Southern Ontario's Choice

Home Inspections Performed the Wright Way

Al Wright

905-730-9300

Al@affordablehomeinspections.ca

www.affordablehomeinspections.ca

Every Homebuyer
Should Avoid

National Association of Certified Home Inspectors

www.NACHI.org

Getting a cheap inspection.

Buying a home is probably the most expensive purchase you will ever make. This is no time to shop for a cheap inspection. The cost of a home inspection is very small relative to the home being inspected. The additional cost of hiring a state licensed and certified inspector is almost insignificant. As a homebuyer, you have recently been crunching the numbers, negotiating offers, adding up closing costs, shopping for mortgages and trying to get the best deals you can. Do not stop now. Do not let your Agent, a party-cake inspector or anyone else talk you into skimping here.

NACHI front-ends its requirements. NACHI turns down more than ½ the inspectors who want to join because they can't fulfill the membership requirements.

State Licensed and NACHI certified inspectors perform the best inspections by far. You will find that NACHI certified inspectors earn their fees many times over. They do more, they deserve more, and yes they generally charge a little more. Do yourself a favor . . . and pay a little more for the quality inspection you need and deserve.

Thinking you can't afford it.

Today, buying the home of your dreams is easier than ever before. Many people who thought that buying the home they wanted was simply out of their reach are now enjoying a new lifestyle in their very own new home.

Buying a home is the smartest financial decision you will ever make. In fact, most American and Canadian home owners would be financially broke at retirement if it wasn't for one saving grace – the equity of their home. Furthermore, mortgage rates are more flexible today than ever and tax allowances favor home ownership.

Real estate values have always risen steadily. Of course there are peaks and valleys, but the long term trend is a consistent increase. This means that every month when you make a mortgage payment the amount that you owe on the home goes down and the house's value typically increases. This 'owe less – worth more' situation is called equity build-up and is the reason you can't afford not to buy.

Even if you have little money for a down payment or credit problems, chances are that you can still buy that new home. It just comes down to knowing the right strategies, and working with the right people.

Not having a Buyer's Agent to represent you.

Buying property is a complex and stressful task. In fact, it is often the biggest single investment you will make in your lifetime. At the same time, real estate transactions have become increasingly complicated. New technology, laws, procedures and competition from other buyers require Real Estate agents to perform at an ever increasing level of professionalism. For many homebuyers, the process turns into a terrible, stressful ordeal. In addition, making the wrong decision can end up costing you thousands of dollars. It does not have to be this way!

Work with a Buyer's Agent who has a keen understanding of the real estate business, the local market and who is on your side. Buyer's Agents have a sole duty to serve you. That means they are loyal to only you and are obligated to look out for your best interests. Real Estate agents can help you find the right home, the right lender and the right inspector. Best of all, in most cases, the Real Estate agent is paid out of the seller's commission, even though he/she works for you.

Trying to buy a home without a Buyer's Agent at all is, well . . . unthinkable.